

Supplemental Loan Comparison Guide

Students are encouraged to consider all options when choosing a supplemental educational loan. It is important to research and compare each option in detail so you select the best possible product for your individual needs. The options listed below highlight the basic characteristics of some lenders used by HGSE students; as such these are not “preferred lenders” and students are not required to borrow through the lenders included on this chart. It is important to note that HGSE participates in the Federal Direct Loan Program and the Federal Direct Graduate PLUS Loan is part of this program. These loans were included based on their accessibility to a variety of students, interest rate options, credit criteria, financial management tools and repayment options. Please refer to the specific lender’s website for comprehensive information regarding their loan program. This is only a small sample of educational lenders available and you are encouraged to explore other sources of supplemental financing not listed on the comparison chart. Harvard University and the Harvard Graduate School of Education have no financial interest in which supplemental loan you choose to borrow. These examples are reviewed and updated annually.

	Federal Direct Graduate PLUS Loan	Additional Supplemental Loan Options For Domestic Students	Supplemental Loans For International Students
Loan Amount Min/Max	$100/Student Budget minus total Financial Aid	Harvard University sought proposals from lenders offering non-federal education loans for the academic year through an open Request for Information process. The RFI was designed so Harvard could provide information to its graduate and professional students on private loan products that have competitive rates and other borrower benefits. The list of lenders who responded to our Request for Information and offer private education loans to domestic students is available at: Harvard University Private Loan Site More information regarding supplemental (private) loan lenders is also available at: FinAid.org	Supplemental loan options for international students are often limited. Harvard University sought proposals from lenders offering supplemental loans to international students for the academic year through an open Request for Information process. The RFI was designed so Harvard could provide information to its international graduate and professional students on private loan products that have competitive rates and other borrower benefits. The list of lenders who responded to our Request for Information and offer private education loans to domestic students is available at: Harvard University Private Loan Site
Cumulative Debt Limit	None
Loan Type	Fixed Rate
Interest Rate	7.543%
Loan Fees (based on total amount borrowed)	4.228% - deducted from loan amount borrowed
Payment Deferment/Grace Period	While enrolled + 6 month grace period after you cease to be enrolled at least half-time
Standard Repayment Period	10 years standard
Additional Repayment Plans	Graduated, extended, income-based, and pay-as-you-earn plans may also be available depending on the borrower.	Additional Information
Misc. Benefits	Borrowers may be eligible for loan forgiveness for certain public service careers	Please note that Harvard University participates in the Federal Direct Loan Program. As such, the Federal Direct Graduate PLUS Loan is the only supplemental loan recommended by the HGSE Financial Aid Office. This is widely considered the most beneficial supplemental loan currently available to U.S. citizens and permanent residents due to the loan’s fixed interest rate, repayment options, loan information disclosure, and ease of application.
Notes	Borrow directly from the US Department of Education, a non-profit entity; various Federal protections for financial hardship
Citizenship Eligibility	US Citizen or permanent residents
Credit Requirement	Credit Worthiness (co-signer option available if needed due to adverse credit)
Application/Contact Information	Available at www.studentaid.gov and available in late June (for the academic year beginning in fall)

Supplemental Loan Comparisons - Choosing the Best Option to Suit Your Individual Needs

We strongly encourage you to consider all the factors involved in choosing a supplemental loan program, such as interest rates, credit check conditions, loan terms, repayment options and benefits, as well as personal financial preference. Harvard University and the Harvard Graduate School of Education have no financial interest in which supplemental loan you choose to borrow.

Your borrowing choice is a personal decision. This information can assist you in making an informed evaluation regarding your supplemental borrowing for your time at HGSE. There are a number of factors to think about when choosing a supplemental loan program. We encourage you to read these materials and make your decision based on the overall merit of a loan program and not simply the total cost.

The following information will cover these main topics:

- ➔ Federal vs. Private Supplemental Loans
- ➔ Citizenship Requirements
- ➔ Credit Requirements
- ➔ The Impact of Your Credit
- ➔ Your Expectation of Interest Rates
- ➔ Your Risk Tolerance
- ➔ Pros and Cons of Fees
- ➔ Repayment Incentives
- ➔ Logistics of Repayment
- ➔ Total Cost

Federal vs. Private Supplemental Loans

Federal Supplemental Loans (Graduate PLUS Loans) generally have more favorable deferment and repayment terms than most supplemental loans offered by private lenders, such as:

- ⇒ A variety of repayment plans to help manage your payment amounts and budget
- ⇒ Unlimited deferment while enrolled in school at least ½ time in a degree-granting program
- ⇒ Protections should you become permanently and totally disabled
- ⇒ The option of forbearance during temporary periods of financial hardship
- ⇒ The possibility of loan forgiveness and/or cancellation for certain public service careers

Many, but not all, private lenders also offer flexible deferment and repayment terms. It is important to consider these terms should you ever need to take advantage of them. BACK TO TOPICS

Citizenship Requirements

Your citizenship status will have an impact on which loan program you can borrow through:

- ⇒ As a domestic or permanent resident student, you can borrow through any loan program.
- ⇒ As an international student, you can only borrow through limited programs such as the HUECU Student Choice Loan Program, which lends to international students. BACK TO TOPICS

Credit Requirements

In general the Graduate PLUS credit review is less stringent than the private supplemental loan credit review. The bullets below give you more details regarding credit requirements.

- ⇒ Graduate PLUS loan approval is based on your credit worthiness. A basic credit check will be run. This means that if you are found to be 90 days or more delinquent on the repayment of any debt or the subject of a default, bankruptcy discharge, foreclosure, repossession, tax lien, wage garnishment or write-off of a Title IV debt during the last five years, your application will be denied.
- ⇒ Approval for private supplemental loan programs is based on your credit score or other credit criteria. This often takes into account all of the above, as well as how many credit cards you hold, the limit on each of those cards and the amount that is accruing in interest. There are other factors that go into your credit score, and you should not think that you will improve your credit score by canceling a credit card. If you need tips on improving your credit score, refer to the credit section of our website or go to www.annualcreditreport.com. BACK TO TOPICS

The Impact of Your Credit

Your credit could impact your interest rate and the program through which you can borrow.

- ⇒ If you have excellent credit, some lenders will offer you a better rate.
- ⇒ If you have poor credit, you can try to apply for a Graduate PLUS Loan since the credit criteria is not as stringent as a private loan.
- ⇒ If you are denied a Graduate PLUS Loan, you may apply with a creditworthy endorser (co-signer) or you will need to apply to a different private supplemental loan program.
- ⇒ If you fail the credit check of any private loan program you may be required to reapply with a co-applicant or co-signer. BACK TO TOPICS

Your Expectation of Interest Rates

Are you the type of person that is more risk-oriented or more conservative in your approach to money and what do you think is going to happen to interest rates in the future? Rates in the past several years have been at historic lows, and interest rates of 5-8% historically are good-to-average rates. Unfortunately, there is no reliable way to predict future interest rates. However, here are some considerations:

- ⇒ If you are more risk-oriented and believe that the average interest rates over the time you hold your loan could go down, then you might want to borrow a loan that has a variable interest rate. The benefit of a variable interest rate loan is that the interest rate could go down during the life of a loan and save you money in the long run.
- ⇒ If you are more risk-averse and believe that the average interest rates over the time you hold your loan will be about the same or will go up, then you may want to borrow a fixed interest rate loan. The benefit of a fixed interest rate loan is that you lock in the current rate for the life of the loan. BACK TO TOPICS

Your Risk Tolerance

Are you someone who can tolerate fluctuations in your monthly payment amount?

- ⇒ If so, a variable interest rate loan may interest you. The interest rate on a variable interest rate loan will change each quarter and your payment will, therefore, change each quarter as well.
- ⇒ If not, you may want to consider borrowing a fixed interest rate loan. With a fixed interest rate your monthly payment will always be the same for the life of the loan. The predictability of this type of loan can help you better manage your money. BACK TO TOPICS

Pros and Cons of Fees

- ⇒ Pros: If the fee enables you to lock in a low, fixed interest rate, you may be better off in the long run if interest rates increase.
- ⇒ Cons: If you pay a fee to take out a loan you may be paying extra costs especially if you pay the loan off early.

It is important to note how loan fees affect the amount that is credited to your student bill. Fees are either added to the loan amount by the lender after disbursement, or they are deducted from the loan amount by the lender prior to disbursement.

All Federal Graduate PLUS loans have a fee deducted from the loan amount. The fee varies depending on the lender. If you decide to borrow through a Graduate PLUS Loan Program you may want to increase the amount of money you borrow to establish your desired net loan amount. Use the following information to determine the net amount to borrow to take the loan fees into account:

Lender	Fee	Divide desired loan amount by:
Federal Direct Grad PLUS	4.228%	0.957

For example:

- You want to borrow a net amount of $10,000.
- There is a 4.228% fee taken prior to disbursement.
- You should apply for $10,000 / 0.957, or about $10,450.

Most other supplemental loan types add the fee to the original loan amount and, therefore, you will not have to increase the amount you borrow to cover the fees. BACK TO TOPICS

Repayment Incentives

Are you planning on paying your loans off in the first few years after graduating?

- ⇒ If so, an interest rate reduction after 4 years of on-time payments may not be a true benefit to you as your loan will already be paid off in full.
- ⇒ If not, you should be honest with yourself about the likelihood that you will be able to meet the benefit requirements. Keep in mind that the repayment incentives are a marketing tool used by the lenders. Roughly only 12 – 19% of borrowers nationally actually achieve the borrower incentives; therefore, we strongly encourage you to make your borrowing decision based on a number of factors and not only the repayment incentives. BACK TO TOPICS

Logistics of Repayment

Are you someone who would prefer to have as few lenders as possible for your federal and supplemental loans?

- ⇒ If so, you may prefer to have as many of your loans as possible to be through the same lender so that you only need to work with one lender. The benefit of this is that you will only have to make one payment each month for the loans through that lender.
- ⇒ Since electronic debiting is very popular and mainstream now (making managing several payments at one time easier) you may be willing to work with more than one lender in order to take advantage of the best interest rates and repayment incentives. BACK TO TOPICS

Total Cost

Total cost should be a factor in making your decision in supplemental loan borrowing; however, we hope that you will consider all of the factors outlined above before making your final choice. You should use this information not as a bottom line comparison, but instead to decide if, for example, a $300 increase in total cost is worth the difference between a fixed and variable interest rate loan, or if a $600 increase is worth the security of federal repayment benefits. We recommend using a web-based interactive loan calculator to help estimate approximate total costs of the supplemental loan(s) that interest you. BACK TO TOPICS